

Your renter has your car before they have anything else.

They booked weeks ago and nobody has told them a thing about the water. You are the first local business they deal with, and the only one whose product has a trunk. A code on your booking confirmation puts live ocean conditions, the beach guide, and your own storefront in their hand while they are still deciding where to go first.

Nobody briefs a Turo renter

A hotel guest gets a front desk. Your renter gets keys in a parking lot and a beach they have never seen. The guide fills a gap that genuinely exists.

The car is the trunk

Gear sells to a driver because they can actually carry it. A cooler and two chairs are an easy yes when the car is right there. A walk-up guest says no.

You reach them first

The confirmation lands days or weeks before arrival — well before any concierge desk gets a word in. That window currently earns you nothing.

How the money actually moves

You are the merchant of record. Store sales settle into your own Square account, in your name, on your books — we never run a sale on your register and never hold your money. The safety guide itself is free to the guest and always will be, so the scan is worth something even to a renter who buys nothing.

Want to see it with your fleet's name on it?

We'll build a demo storefront with your gear list and send you the codes. No cost, no commitment.
