Stay-Close

The live beach-safety guide guests actually open — that quietly fills your own tour board.

Paid plan $8 / room / mo

You keep 100% of every sale

The amenity guests open — that becomes your highest-intent tour channel.

Every guest checks the beach before they leave the villa. Stay-Close is the in-room beach-safety guide they actually want to open — real-time conditions, hazards, and lifeguard status for the exact beaches around your resort. Riding inside that useful tool is a segment-aware engine that routes the right guests into your own ownership presentations and owner updates. OceanSafe routes the lead and stops there. You run the tour, you keep every dollar.

RENTER

Tour funnel

Qualify → pick a resort-funded gift
→ book a same-trip session, or opt into next-trip nurture.

EXCHANGE

Tour funnel

Same path, tuned for exchange guests. Anyone who doesn't qualify gets a friendly activity off-ramp.

OWNER

Update + referral

More points, add a week, upgrade the unit, plus referral. Never a "buy ownership" pitch.

The owner guardrail is hard-coded, not a policy memo.

The owner path has no "buy ownership" pitch in it to accidentally trigger — owners only ever see owner-update and referral options. Your GM can verify it in the live demo in 30 seconds, before a single placard goes in a room. It's the answer to the only brand-risk objection that matters.

Guests self-identify with one of three printed QR placards — renter, exchange, or owner — and the experience forks to match.

The funnel only works because the guide is genuinely worth opening.

Every in-room amenity claims guests will use it. This one gets opened because the ocean here is genuinely dangerous for visitors — and your guests know it. Real-time conditions, hazards, and lifeguard status for the beaches around your resort is information they actively want, every morning of the stay. That daily habit is the attention everything else in this brochure rides on.

Fatal ocean drownings that are visitors

76% on Kaua'i

Roughly two-thirds of O'ahu's drownings happen at unguarded beaches. The guide steers guests to guarded beaches and live conditions — a real service to the people sleeping in your units, and the reason a placard in the room earns a scan instead of a shrug.

A safety amenity — not a liability shield.

We never claim the guide satisfies any legal duty to warn, and this isn't legal advice. What it is: a credible, genuinely useful safety layer your guests open on their own — which is exactly what makes it the highest-attention surface on the property.

Live surf, wind, and hazard conditions for the exact beaches your guests are choosing between.

The decision window is the last 72 hours — and you're already in the room.

Vacation decisions aren't made at home anymore. They're made on-island, on a phone, a day or two before the activity. That's precisely the window a same-trip tour session competes in — and Stay-Close is the tool already open in your guest's hand when the decision happens.

Same-trip sessions, with real scarcity

Guests book an on-property session for this stay — you set the slots and the "spots left" capacity. No call-transfer, no cold list: the booking happens inside the guide they already opened.

Timed campaigns land in the window PAID

Schedule a real, date-bounded boost — "+$50 dining credit for booking by Friday" — aimed at one segment, live only while it's true. It shows up exactly when 40% of decisions are being made.

In-destination and deciding: more than half of activity research moves to mobile once guests arrive — and travel apps convert at roughly 3x mobile web.

The license doesn't need to drive sales. It needs to drive a few tours.

A timeshare ownership tour is worth a lot. Industry-standard economics: an attended tour closes at roughly 12–18%, and a single closed sale nets $15,000–$30,000+. Even an unclosed attended tour is a qualified, already-on-property prospect that cost nothing to acquire. So the break-even bar is low.

~9x

One incremental tour per room every three years covers the license about nine times over. At a conservative ~15% close and ~$18k net, one attended tour is worth ~$2,700 — against a 3-year per-room cost of ~$288.

License, per room	$8 / mo
Mid-size property (~200 units)	$1,600 / mo
Break-even, per year	~8 tours
...or, in closed sales	~1.2 / yr

Free to start. Pay only for the numbers.

The beach-safety guide and the lead engine that fills your tour board are free — put them in every unit today, no card, no clock. The paid plan is $8/room/month, and it adds what your GM actually watches: real revenue per room, CRM routing, timed campaigns, and the sales-desk dashboard. Billed monthly, cancel anytime. You keep 100% of every tour and every dollar it produces; we never touch your revenue.

What 1,000 guest stays turn into.

Same math as the previous page, walked through a number your team already tracks: check-ins. For a ~200-unit property, 1,000 stays is roughly five weeks of turns. Every assumption below is deliberately conservative — and the paid dashboard replaces all of them with your measured funnel in month one.

~5x

License cost for those same five weeks at $8/room: about $2,000. Conservative expected value: ~$10,800 — before counting a single owner update or referral, which ride the same guide at zero extra cost.

Owner updates & referrals	not counted
Unclosed attended tours (qualified, on-property prospects)	not counted
Next-trip nurture list	not counted
Safety & guest-experience value of the guide itself	not counted

A model, not a promise.

Open rate comes from travel-app benchmarks; show and close rates from industry ranges. Your property will differ — which is the point of the dashboard: from month one it reports your real open, book, show, and close numbers, and this page stops being a model.

Prove the number on your own dashboard.

Stay-Close doesn't ask you to take the ROI on faith. Your operator console turns real guest bookings and your sales desk's logged outcomes into actual revenue — measured in your units, not modeled. It also shows which offers actually land, which reps close, and when in the stay guests book. Every figure below is the kind your GM watches month to month.

What OceanSafe does

Puts the beach-safety guide in every unit, routes qualified guests to your tours, and shows you the numbers. No fulfillment, no IT lift, no cut of your revenue.

What you keep

Every tour, every presentation, every sale — and 100% of the dollars. We're a flat per-room software license, not a partner in your margin.

Put it in your units this quarter.

Start free — the guide and the lead engine, live in every room, nothing to sign. Move to the paid plan when you want the dollars proven on your own dashboard. No clock, no card to start — cancel anytime.
